With all the information I can gather, my opinion at the present writing is, that the Whigs have carried their Governor and the Legislature and their correct contents and their Congressmen. The Loco Congressmen ran far better than their candidate for Governor; and as to the Legislature, I have just seen a Loco from the lower part of the Territory, who says that the Legislature has been lost to his party, by the indiscretion of the friends of Dodge, the present Delegate to Congress—that a pledge had been procured from most of the Loco candidates for the Legislature to vote for Dodge for U. The Government has informed Mr. Donelson that the King Consul in the Rhenish provinces, but that he wanted our Mr. Graebe had been previously offered by the Prussian come a Prussian subject, which he declined declaring upon a system of Musical Notation in which the Note, by that he considered the honor of being an American its form, and its position upon the stem, is made to repernment could confer on him. The reason of the refusal of the exequatur, says the Journal's correspondent, and the declaration to exclude all our citizens from their own consulate in the Rhenish provinces, is so novel and singular that it will appear incredible. Mr. Donelson has reported this rather offensive demand, and it is now to be seen what our Government will do. It cannot well yield to the bidding of the Prussian Government, as it would proscribe thereby all our citizens, and de-clare them unfit to fill our own offices.

It gives us pleasure, therefore, to say to them that we have seen a letter from Mr. Joel T. He had been watched by a tiding-man at church on a subtry Sunday, when he was releving the tedium of listening to along doctrinal sermon by cutting eblong holes and deep initials in the side of the pine pew in which he sat in the gellery and was led by the ear, in the presence of the whole congregation, to the condemned pew, where all bad boys were placed as in a criminal dock—While he was in this conspicuous duress, his cheeks burning-red with shame, the holy idding-man had seated himself at the foot of the gallery-stairs, by the open porch-door, where, owing to the sultry day and the sunnolency of the discourse, he presently began to nod—Now there was a huge goat belonging to a descon, who lived near the church, and this goat had been tought, by press. It is by that well known novelist, ALEXANDES weeks past. No approach to reconciliation, though its DUMAS, and translated from the French into choice Eng. more required than ever. You ask what party we es pouse, and said, immediately, I need not ask. This is ambiguous at best. I wish very much you had given us "THE CHRISTIAN PARLOR MAGAZINE" for your own opinion, but, however, here is ours. In the November, just issued, contains a good mezzotint, first place I think each person has a right to form and Christ weeping over Jerusalem, and a flower-piece—fol. retain his own opinions be they right or wrong, while lowed by a number of interesting articles, poetry and he believes them right. Still more, I think a person who holds an erroneous opinion ossistientiously becomes "A SELECTION OF IRISH SONGS AND BAL. Suilty by suppressing it. I do not mean that he should throw his opinions in the face of every one he meets, but when occasions arise or a proper opportunity, or when called upon for an avowal of them, he, as I said before, becomes guilty of moral cowardice by concealing right in every stage of their progress, and admire their forbearance throughout. You know how great was our enthusiasm for O'Connell-perhaps we had more prejudices to overcome than many, but truth before all, and I would not, as Cowper says, 'to the image of a name surrender Judgment hoodwinked."

This is the reason why capital crimes increase, and this is the reason also that while they increase, the hangman stands almost lidle by the lecafold. These as we said before, are not mere conjectures. The records of the country show a regular addition to crimes of the first degree, while the acquittals of those against whose guilt not half a shadow rests, prove the failure of the rules of punishment which comprehend them.

We are not alone in this adverse solution of the problem of capital punishment. According to Mr. Redgrave's English tables, which are made up from the statistics of the last six years, we find a regular and growing decrease of every specific crime which shuts out the gallows, and while these tables show an increase of all offences that are visited with death, they also show a fearful disproportion of convictions.

There must be some remedy adopted for this state of things, and that remedy must be the repeal of a statute whose impracticable rule has proved to be the encouragement of the very crime which it vainly endeavors to suppress.
